Coloring Page

Yellow-headed Blackbirds are black with a yellow head and some white patches on their wings. Their song is a harsh, hoarse song, possibly the most unique of all North American birds. Yellow-headed Black-birds can be found in western North America. Their population has declined, but is still stable. They make their homes in fresh marshes. Yellow-headed Blackbirds always build their nests over water. They migrate in flocks with the males going more north than females.
